ORDER

GÓMEZ, C.J.

Before the Court is the motion of defendant Malik Ostalaza ("Ostalaza") to dismiss the indictment.

Ostalaza and his co-defendant, Ronald Lewis, Jr., were charged in May, 2008 in a five-count indictment. Count One charges Ostalaza with possession of a firearm with an obliterated serial number, in violation of Title 18, Section 922(k) of the United States Code ("Section 922"). Counts Four and Five charge Ostalaza with unauthorized possession of a firearm, in violation of Title 14, Section 2253(a) of the Virgin Islands Code.

Ostalaza is not charged in Counts Two and Three.

Ostalaza now argues that Counts One, Four and Five should be dismissed because they violate the Second Amendment of the Constitution. In his motion, Ostalaza neglects to substantiate that argument with citations to any authority. Instead, Ostalaza points to District of Columbia v. Heller, No. 07-290, 2008 U.S. LEXIS 5268 (June 26, 2008), a case that was pending before the Supreme Court at the time his motion was filed. Ostalaza states only that he "reserves the right to challenge" the indictment on Second Amendment grounds. (Def. Ostalaza's Mot. to Dismiss 2.)

In United States v. Rybar, 103 F.3d 273, 286 (3d Cir. 1996), cert. denied, 522 U.S. 807 (1997), the Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit explained that "the Second Amendment furnishes no absolute right to firearms." Relying on its decision in Rybar, in United States v. Willaman, 437 F.3d 354, 356-57 (3d Cir. 2006), cert. denied, 547 U.S. 1208 (2006), the Third Circuit rejected the defendant's contention that Section 922 violates the Second Amendment. In reference to the defendant's argument that Rybar "is simply bad law," the Willaman

Court stated that "plainly [Rybar] is binding on this panel." Id. at 357.

Like the defendant in Willaman, Ostalaza does no more than argue that Rybar and Willaman "are wrongly decided." (Def. Ostalaza's Mot. to Dismiss 2.) Like the Willaman Court, this Court is bound by those decisions.<sup>1</sup>

The premises considered, it is hereby

ORDERED that the motion to dismiss is DENIED.

<sup>1</sup> Moreover, while the Supreme Court acknowledged in Heller the right of the individual to possess a firearm unconnected with service in a militia, the Court also held that that right is not unfettered. See 2008 U.S. LEXIS 5268, at *95 n.26 (identifying "presumptively lawful regulatory measures" and noting that the Court's list of those measures "does not purport to be exhaustive").
